TASMIN REED

HALF-ELF BARD

Your master died this past winter. Silvanius the Loremaster, bard, historian, man of considerable opinions about other people's songs, dead at last in a chair by a window with most of a sentence still in him. You were there. You held the pen until there was nothing left to write.

Twenty-four years with him. The first ten at his table, learning to read and write and transcribe before you had a fixed address. The last fourteen traveling and adventuring at his side, sitting with survivors, reading archives, and getting into the kind of trouble a loremaster and his apprentice reliably find when they go looking for true history. By the time he died, you had transcribed four major histories, traveled the length of the Shield Lands twice, sat through more archival correspondence than you will ever want to count, and learned more about the last hundred years of Oerth than most people learn in a lifetime. You know the names of the company that broke at Blackmoor and what they carried. You know about Aprif Al-Hazim, near-immortal, last seen descending into the Sunless Sea seven years ago and not returned. You know about the three weapons, the mountain, and what Silvanius spent the last decade of his life quietly afraid of.

You know more than he ever meant to teach you. You know he knew that.

ABILITIES

BARD ABILITIES

LEGEND LORE (30%):

Tasmin may attempt to recall specific historical information about a legendary item, notable figure, or significant location.

FASCINATE:

Once per encounter, Tasmin may attempt to fascinate a creature within 30 ft. through song or performance. The target must save vs. spells or stand transfixed for 1d4 rounds. Breaks immediately if the target is physically threatened or harmed. Unintelligent creatures and creatures under magical compulsion are immune.

COUNTER SONG:

While performing, Tasmin can attempt to negate sound-based magical effects. Allies within 30 ft. receive +2 to saving throws against charm, fear, and compulsion effects delivered through sound.

DRUIDIC SPELL TRADITION:

Tasmin was trained in the old bardic college form, which draws from the druidic tradition rather than arcane study. Her spells are drawn from the druid list, not the magic-user list. She cannot cast wizard spells. A magic-user scroll read aloud will function once, but it will not feel like hers.

HALF-ELF ABILITIES

DETECT SECRET DOORS:

1 in 6 passing within 10 ft.; 2 in 6 when actively searching.

INFRAVISION:

60 ft.

SLEEP AND CHARM RESISTANCE:

+2 to saves against sleep and charm effects (already reflected in save targets above).
