

06_brynn_ashwood

CLASS: UNKNOWN | RACE: HUMAN | LEVEL: ?

ABILITY SCORES

ABILITY	SCORE	NOTES
Strength	10	,
Dexterity	13	51 AC
Constitution	15	+1 hp/die
Intelligence	13	,
Wisdom	16	+2 magical defence bonus
Charisma	14	Reaction +1; 1

SAVING THROWS

Death / Poison	9
Wands	13
Paralyzation	10
Breath Weapon	12
Spells	14

COMBAT STATISTICS

HP: 38
AC: 5
THACO: 18
ATTACKS/RD: 1
MOVEMENT: 12"

WEAPONS & ATTACKS

WEAPON	+HIT	DAMAGE	NOTES
Scimitar +1	+1	1d8+1	Primary melee; Druids use cur...
Sling	+0	1d4	Range 5"/10"/20"; 20 bullets
Dagger	+0	1d4	Utility /last resort

SPELLS MEMORISED

1ST LEVEL (3 SLOTS)

- Entangle
- Faerie Fire

2ND LEVEL (3 SLOTS)

- Barkskin
- Slow Poison

3RD LEVEL (2 SLOTS)

- Hold Animal

EQUIPMENT

Worn: Leather armour, medium shield, scimitar +1, wooden holy symbol (ash-leaf design), ring on left hand
Pack: Sling + 20 bullets, dagger, rations x5, waterskin of Ringstown well water (full, see below), bedroll, holly and mistletoe (Druidic focus), healer's herbs (4 uses, each restores 1d4 hp and neutralises mild poison), 50 ft hempen rope, small hand axe (utility tool)
Coin: 32 gp, 18 sp

MAGIC ITEMS

SCIMITAR +1:
A blade she inherited from her grove's previous warden, who did not survive a troll encounter three years ago. She carries it as a reminder that competence is not the same as invincibility.

RING OF PROTECTION +1:
A simple wooden ring, lacquered and hardened. Given to her by the grove council when she left to investigate the Thicket. "Come back," they said. She intends to.

POTION OF HEALING:
Standard preparation, 1d8+1 hp. Wrapped in oilskin in the bottom of her pack.

WATERSKIN OF RINGSTOWN WELL WATER:
Not magical, just well water from before she entered the Thicket. The Ringstown well is noted as drawing from a pre-Flan source that predates the current contamination. This waterskin qualifies as a valid anchor for Old Brindle's cleansing rite at Area 4. Brynn brought it specifically because she read the signs and suspected she might need something clean and untouched.

PERSONALITY

- Speaks to trees, animals, and plants as a matter of course. Does not apologise for this. Genuinely listens for responses.
- Has a pragmatist's relationship with death, living things die, that is the nature of living things, but what is happening in the Thicket is not natural death and she distinguishes between the two clearly.
- Will argue for calming the owlbear rather than killing it, clearly and without apology, until the evidence suggests it is impossible. Then she will say "I understand" and help kill it cleanly.

Brynn Ashwood

HUMAN DRUID

You have been grove-warden for five years, managing the woodland commons south of the Critwall road. Your grove touches the southern edge of the Twisted Thicket, which means you have been watching the contamination advance toward you one season at a time. This is not a metaphor. You have observed it the way you observe the progress of disease in a stand of trees: species by species, meadow by meadow, the silence spreading outward from somewhere in the north.

You came to Ringstown three weeks ago to report what you had seen: the deteriorating vegetation at the Thicket's edge, the white powder on a dead fox's muzzle, the absence of the songbirds. You brought samples. You had documentation.

Ranger-Captain Elnara looked at your samples and said: "I know. Wait here."

You have been waiting. You are not good at waiting when things are dying.